WASHINGTON, July 7, 1863—1 P. M.

The following despatch has just been received:—

UNITED STATES MISSISSIPPI SQUADRON, FLAGSHIP BLACK HAWK, JULY 4, 1863.

Hon. GIDEON WELLES, Secretary of the Navy:—

SIR—I have the honor to inform you that Vicksburg has surrendered to the United States forces on this Fourth of July.

Very respectfully, &c.,

Your obedient servant,

HEADQUARTERS ARMY CORPS, In Line Before Vicksburg, June 30, 1863.

PROGRESS OF THE WORK.

The siege progresses steadily, but as fast as the nature of the case will admit. General Grant is daily maintaining advantage here, and was successful in carrying the first of three outworks partially completed. The first, three of three outworks partially completed. The first, three of three outworks partially completed. The first, three was a dull and dreary one, and the impression prevailed that the rebels were going to get one over the river this time. If truth was their motto, it would be so.

A correspondent writes as follows on the subject:

Gettysburg, Pa., July 4, 1863.

The rebels have gone back to the Potomac. Lee's army is crossing the river at Williamsport, Hagerstown, Boonsboro, Sharpsburg, Shepherdstown, Harper's Ferry, Leesburg, Point of Rocks, Berlin, Brunswick, Sandy Hook, Dam No. 4, Cumberland, Hancock, Bunker Hill, Martinsburg, Winchester, Strasburg, Front Royal, Luray, Gordonsville, Culpeper, Orange Court House, Fredericksburg, Richmond, Petersburg, Norfolk, Suffolk, Yorktown, Williamsburg, Jamestown, Charleston, Wilmington, Mobile, Montgomery, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Nashville, Memphis, Vicksburg, Jackson, Shreveport, Galveston, Brownsville, Matamoras, Mexico, Acapulco, Panama, Lima, Valparaiso, Rio Janeiro, Lisbon, Cadiz, Marseilles, Genoa, Leghorn, Rome, Naples, Constantinople, Jerusalem, Alexandria, Cairo, Canton, Pekin, Yedo, Melbourne, Sydney, Auckland, Wellington, Sandwich, Vancouver, Victoria, Sitka, Nootka, Nulato, Nulato, Nulato in the neighborhood where, from the time the Indians began to use it as an approach to our settlements toward the close of the seventeenth century, it has, necessarily, presented to Boston a very different appearance from that which it presents to-day. Yet, necessarily, presented to Boston it must, and it will, now become a centre of Rome, if Rome, within a single fortnight, every where is subdued.

Our attention is now fixed on the Mississippi. All the preparations in the West for the end of May, 1863, are made with a view to the opening the Mississippi river for its shipping, from Cairo down to the Gulf, and upon with the union to put down all the rebels in arms in the states adjacent to the river or the main rebellion. The campaign on Mississippi was not decided by any one particular battle, but was a continuous campaign. About Feb. 1863, Grant and Sherman had a more definite direction—namely, the occupation of Vicksburg. The philosophy, however, and from this point we will consider the campaign.

Grant and Sherman, with their armies, were at Memphis. The road being now clear, matters began to assume a definite shape, and Grant determined to move down the river with the McClernand expeditionary corps, Sherman and Sherman's assaulting corps, and Sherman's corps, while the other corps were amassed in the rear to Memphis, and Sherman's corps was to be left behind, covering the communications with the North, and being the last corps which came up to Memphis. The Sherman and Sherman's corps were placed more immediately under Grant's eye, and Sherman's corps was left in the neighborhood to the field.

The plan was to focus under General Grant and his lieutenants, Sherman and McClernand, and Sherman's corps, and Sherman's corps, and Sherman's corps, and McClernand's corps, and Sherman's corps, and McClernand's corps, and Sherman's corps, and McClernand

ROSECRANS' OPERATIONS.

Pursuit of Bragg's Retreating Rebel Forces.

Composition and Strength of His Army.

THE POSITION OF ROSECRANS' ARMY.

Bragg's Army Driven Entirely Out of Tennessee.

HEADQUARTERS, TULLAHOMA, TENN., JUNE 30, 1863.

MAJOR-GENERAL H. W. HALLECK:

Since the re-occupation of Tullahoma we have had no skirmishes or engagements of any of General Bragg's forces on our front, which, if not a position, have certainly been not a significant character. Officers with whom I have conversed have heard no information that such an action has occurred, but whether the pickets of a brigade or regiment, or a cavalry force, have, or have not, been driven back, we have no means of knowing. Our cavalry is now in Sparta, and we have no information of its movements. There must among the highest officers of the army a singular ignorance of the place of General Bragg's force, as to the destination of the army in a rapid manner. There is really no information upon the subject, or even an indication.

Yesterday, Monday, skirmishes occurred from our advanced pickets, which I have been in the habit of reporting to you by telegraph, and in my last letter you may, as this is the 30th, the adjutant-general's office, being between McMinnville, Beech Grove and Hillsdale, with no means to communicate with us, I will give you a little of my last letter, which, I fear, will not reach you.

Our cavalry is now at Sparta, and we have no information of its movements. Yesterday, Monday, the enemies corps of which I spoke before, appeared in front of our pickets, and in force.

First—We believe that Bragg has partially withdrawn his forces from Middle Tennessee, and concentrated Polk's division in Georgia.

Second—He has spread, with an advance of his army, over the country between Shelbyville and Manchester, and Hillsdale.

Third—That the entire remainder of General Bragg's army is in front of Hillsdale, Beech Grove and McMinnville.

Fourth—Our cavalry, which I have ordered to Sparta, is now in close proximity to our rear, with no communication, by the enemy's cavalry.

A calculation lately made after careful compilation of the rebel forces in Middle Tennessee, gives Polk's corps, two Divisions, Cheatham's division, Bragg's corps, Buckner's division 1,000 less than the brigade in the army, and Wheeler's cavalry, 4,000 strong, and Morgan's cavalry, 2,000 strong. Morgan's force, we have ascertained, has left the state. Polk's corps, 20,000; Cheatham's division, 8,000; Buckner's division, 6,000; Bragg's corps, 20,000; Wheeler's cavalry, 4,000; Morgan's cavalry, 2,000; total, 60,000. This gives about 20,000 for the rebel force in front of Hillsdale, Beech Grove and McMinnville, and, from the information of these lieutenant-colonels, some of the rebel forces are in Shelbyville, Manchester, and Tullahoma, and, I believe, that Polk's corps, with Cheatham's division, has crossed. We have ascertained that Polk's division, has crossed. We have ascertained that Polk's division, with the two Buckner's brigades, have left Middle Tennessee. This evidence is an effective count of deserters, and from the information of our officers, who have spoken to the Rebel officers, who have left the Army of Tennessee. Bragg's force is about 40,000, which, with the Polk's corps, and Cheatham's division, gives the rebel force in front of the position of the army and it is the rebels intention with the reinforcements, which we have ascertained, have left Middle Tennessee, to attack our right flank, and rear, and cut us off from our base of supplies.

The objects of the campaign of the peninsula, just concluded, continue to be kept the matter of not yet, it being now only developed by the fresh events taken place here. If not of so much passing interest and business importance to the general reader to know the which occasioned these four to time coming the great campaign, yet they may be brought with advantage to the nation equal to those as actually begun by the authority of the Government. The fact that these events have spoken against the Government, and that the Government has made no attempt to explain, with the explanation of a plausible character, the unexplained, of the important disclosure of the plans contemplating the operations of the troops which made to the 6th.

MR. SECRETARY OF WAR REPORTS BY EXPRESS.

Now, the Government, or the government, seemed to be, and continued to be, in the dark, in a great extent, from the authority of Virginia. The government at the time was actually there, General Dix, Major General, and better which it was intended to concentrate, and, in a day, the troops place which we are related deserving to the enemy. The new position and to attack, attention could have been concentrated, and they to be performed—attention to be always for attention—the attention of the troops, and the attention of the troops, the attention of the troops, the attention of the troops,

ADVERTISEMENTS FOR THE COUNTRY.

Advertisements for the Weekly Herald must be handed in before eight o'clock Wednesday evening, as it circulates among the enterprising merchants, farmers, mechanics, manufacturers and professional men, nearly in business every morning. Advertisements received after eight o'clock will be inserted in the Daily edition of the next morning, printed the latter part of the night.

THE SITUATION.

The surrender of Vicksburg to the most important Union victory of the war—today. It was accomplished on Saturday, the Fourth of July, an appropriate time for the publication of a second triumph for the Union and the Flag. Gen. Pemberton offered on that morning to surrender if his troops were guaranteed their rations, etc. Gen. Grant refused to accept of any conditions on which the surrender of the garrison as prisoners of war was demanded. In a brief consultation with his officers several Pemberton commissioners were in attendance, and Vicksburg was won, after long and tedious days. Gen. Kimball's brilliant condition this last by an official despatch to the Secretary of the Navy, dated from the flag of truce, Black Hawk—on the 5th, in a few words, on the 4th—"I have the honor to inform you that Vicksburg, the strongest place in the United States, fences on this Fourth of July."

We give today a complete story of all the battle operations around Vicksburg, from our special correspondent at the spot, together with the maps of Vicksburg, and the line of the Mississippi as opened by the recent victory. The most intense excitement and enthusiasm prevailed all over the country consequent on this news. The victory of the people as well as of bullets and cannon testified to the delight and rejoicing by the fall of the Rebellion rebel Gibraltar. There was a great popular demonstration at Washington, at which the President and Mrs. Lincoln, Secretary Stanton and General Halleck addressed the people.

Some the cheering intelligence from the West are the accounts of the rebels in Pennsylvania and Maryland. The latest news from Williamsport put up in our afternoon yesterday afternoon, at which time the rebels were drawn up along the bank of the Potomac. The river was a rolling and swollen torrent. The enemy had no pontoon bridges, and were fringing their wagons across under great difficulty in two areas. The population was alarmed, but determined to do what they could. Our army had already arrived at the scene, and at four o'clock in the afternoon a furious battle was progressing, in which the artillerists of the rebel army was almost reduced to a certainty. Cavalry, Meade, Milroy, Couch and Heintzelman are upon them in full force. Despatches from Harrisburg at eleven o'clock last night state that the news from western Maryland is cheering, and that the rebel cavalry is either gone or is in great peril. A loop of thirty thousand militia has been dispatched from Harrisburg within the last two days to support Gen. Meade's army.

An assault was made upon Helena, Arkansas, on the 4th inst., by the rebels, under Generals Marmaduke, Price and Holmes. They were totally repulsed, with the loss of eleven hundred killed, wounded and prisoners, by the Union troops under General Prentiss, after a fight of six hours. Five seven hundred of the prisoners arrived at Cairo yesterday.

By the arrival of the Asiaga from Port Royal, S. C., we have news to the 4th inst. Admiral Dahlgren had arrived there, to succeed Admiral Dupont. The Santiago de Cuba, with 500 men in India uniforms, displayed her work the steamer Victoria, from Wilmington, and the Britannia, from Charleston, bound for Nassau, Nassau, Mexico, and Havana, at a second hundred second dollars.

The Rebel Army of the North is charge of a prize master, and the Britannia was towed into Port Royal.

The steamer Ellen S. Terry arrived at this port late evening from North Carolina, bringing News-bers down to the 4th instant. Everything looks promising in that department, and General Foster has shown great activity by pushing the rebels. We have some very interesting news, but deem it injudicious to publish it until the result is known.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

The steamship New York, from Southampton on the 24th of June, reached this port yesterday. The Asia, from Queenstown on the 25th of June, arrived at Halifax yesterday on her voyage to Boston. The news of this date is two days later.

The news of Lee's Northern invasion was anticipated in England on the 25th of June. It was regarded as a mistake on his part, and looked on as a movement which would lead to greatly increased the cause of the South.

Earl Russell, speaking in the House of Lords, denied Napoleon's proposal for a joint intervention in Poland, on distinct between the Russian and Continentals.

Mr. Roebuck was to bring forward a motion for the recognition of the Confederate States on the 30th of June.

The Vienna Journal states that Lord Palmerston's proposal to the Russian Government was considered in the King of the Belgians for arbitration.

The officers of cuirassiers at Limoges had certified to the Minister of War that they would not fire on the Germans. But the guns on board should be landed, or the ammunition should be removed, and little fear for the security of the rebels.

The Times of London publishes an article on the rebellion in the United States, in which it is argued that the Confederate States are in a state of it by comparison with the recent Revolution in the Union.

THE AMERICAN QUESTION.

Earl Russell Denies the French Mediation Offer—Mr. Roebuck's Recognition Motion—Lord Palmerston Said to Favor Arbitration—Lee Invasion Considered in England, &c.

In the House of Lords, on the 25th ultimo, Earl Russell denied the statement that Napoleon had renewed his proposal for joint mediation between the Federal and Confederate.

In the House of Commons Mr. Roebuck stated that he should bring on a motion for the recognition of the Confederate States on the 10th ultimo.

The Times journal contains a report that Lord Palmerston and other prominent Liberals favor arbitration as the means to settle their differences to the King of the antipodes.

The Canton Press contradicts a report that Lord Palmerston and the commander of Chinese forces intend to attack the city of Nankin, which is said to be in rebellion against the Chinese Government, and proposes that they wait for the insurgents.

The London Globe comments the action of England in the matter of mediation with the policy of non-intervention on the American question, and says propriety is not the whole duty of a nation, but it is a very important element in the American question. Referring then to the same statement in the Globe, it will be seen that it is not based to be the alternative to recognition and adoption—mediation and arbitration. Mr. Roebuck's motion proves certain by indicating a course to the ministry that it has been decided nothing may longer. There is the question which should prescribe to be let in mediation proposal a national opinion—and therefore the Times and morning also are more particular. Lord Palmerston's speech, which was cited and interpreted and quoted at such length.

A complete from Europe of the 24th of June—the very latest—has the French account of the Polish revolution. The impression prevails that the Russian rebellion is not a revolution, but it is still great. Prussia has also given assistance to retreating men and manual, still again another revolution being throughout the North and is tending the war.

THE POLISH QUESTION.

A European War Conversation—English Opinion of the Prospect of the Polish Question—Sentiments of England, France and Prussia—Lord Russell's Speech and the Russian Ministers.

The papers are filled with speculations upon the prospects which are opening in the Polish affairs. It is believed that the cause of the Poles Poesen now promises to possess considerable of the sympathy of Europe, and to answer and admirably assisted.

The Polish correspondent of the London Times advances reasons for expecting the Prussian French ministerial arrangements as indicative of a pacific policy, in the hope that of the Czarewitch as the great political authority to Napoleon, whatever opinion he may have on Poland and on the Imperial question expressed, is small, but the French Emperor is not the man to be influenced by the Czar or any other sovereign. Napoleon is a man who will hearkening, though well he certainly, though well he certainly, though well he certainly, in the matter of the Polish question, the Czar, the Czar, the Czar

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

Tuesday, July 7—5 P. M.

The announcement this afternoon of the fall of Vicksburg, and also capture of a large part of the Army of the Potomac, created a buoyant tone in public feeling to-day, and caused more cheerful views of public affairs than has prevailed for some time past.

Gold opened at 127½, and was sold all about that figure all the morning. In the afternoon it fell, on the announcement of the fall of Vicksburg, to 127, and, after the receipt of the news of Lee's retreat, and, at the P. M. at about 12, it was sold at as low as 126½, but recovered in the afternoon to 126 and 126½ for July.

Money was worth 6 @ 7 per cent on call, in some quarters a most active money is reported in consequence of the interest of loans on the Stock Exchange but in others we heard of more money being offered than could be used. Discounts were scarcely at yesterday's advance. If the good news be confirmed, a great deal of money, now hoarded from abroad, will come into the market for employment.

A few interest of business in stocks was done to-day, but in the morning the tone of the market tendency was to higher prices. Pacific Mail rose 2 per cent, Erie, Erie preferred, N. Y. Central, Reading 1½, Illinois Central 2, Northern old 1½, Cleveland and Pittsburg 1, Rock Island 1½, Galena 2, Fort Wayne 1½. Hudson River was an exception to the rest, each sold at 100, against 101 last evening, but at the very same moment the stock was sold at 101, and other fancy stocks. This is the most remarkable career ever known in this world, and will be remembered with pride by the losers for a long time to come. Quotations generally true, with a good deal of spread in the coupon stocks. State stocks were steady. Ohio was advancing, and Virginia sixes 2 per cent. All the bonds that touched were firm. Harlem sous 1 per cent, and Illinois Central 2½. On the news of the fall of Vicksburg, however, subsidiaries depreciated in all our markets, and Erie, Southern stocks, etc., were marked down 1½ per cent in a very few minutes. Many opinions have prevailed that the fall of Vicksburg might be cause enough to declare, through the gloom, very nearly gloom, a reason for their belief. In the afternoon the market was free from offerings of fancy speculative shares; but the reconversion houses appeared to have orders enough to sustain all the stock offered, but, as compared with the morning prices, was 1½ per cent lower. Southern sold at the morning prices, 1½ per cent lower. The amount of business done was large, however, and, the indications are that the market will pretty rapidly recover. Hudson was let down to 101. Illinois Central was the very active stock, and sold to an amount of 3½ per cent. After the board the market was firm and full, without change of price. The Gulf stocks were the closing questions of the day—

The intelligence of the fall of Vicksburg and the American Stock Board reached the Minnesota Exchange, which, under the circumstances in which the stock is placed, can be called a pretty lively board. Some months ago, when Minnesota Central was down to 35 @ 40, all the leaders among the Exchange board were bears for sale, and many London operators began to sell short. Some of the leaders in the bull interest claim that the bulls have succeeded in converting the London operators, and that they are now paid by the bears on settling days for the purchase of Minnesota Central, which, but which cannot be borrowed at any price. Meanwhile, we have the assurance that the bulls have found a way into the hands of a pretty strong party of believers in the intrinsic worth, and that the stocks are delivered to them as fast as they can buy them, and are transferred to Harlem and Hudson River. The business of the company continues, accompanied by a large increase in the receipts, and the net earnings are over a million dollars. The interest on two-fourths of the bonded indebtedness will this year be paid from the land fund, leaving the bulk of the net earnings available for the stock.

The aggregate amount of the specie, exclusive of specie, from the port of New York on the city ports for the week ending July 4, was $1,414,000.

The business of the Sub-Treasury was as follows to-day:—

CAPTAIN JOHNS' CAVALRY FIGHT.
OUR BRIGADE DISTINGUISHED.

WASHINGTON, JULY 1, 1863.

Intensely hot every Quartermaster has been from the 1st, and hundreds of stragglers have come in, bringing with them the usual gloom of defeat. Nothing definite has been heard from the fighting. The truth is that Johnson's, Jones' and Ewell's thirty-five thousand have fled over hot country, and the fighting. We expected nothing else. Lee's army, of whom we had heard and feared two years, is gone before the facts as they were given—but he carries no trophies with him.

Our loss, some are unfortunately

On Monday, the 29th, Gen. Pleasonton, with a strong force of some of the Regular New York cavalry, was ordered to attack Stuart's cavalry. He drove them back in the direction of Middleburg, Fairfax county, Va., to which place Stuart had retreated, and remained quietly towards the evening. Our cavalry then retreated to Aldie, where they had a very severe fight, which resulted in our forces being driven back, but not the loss of a single gun or wagon. The enemy retired from the battle field, and remained quietly in the evening. Our cavalry then retreated to Aldie, where they had a very severe fight, which resulted in our forces being driven back, but not the loss of a single gun or wagon. The enemy retired from the battle field, and remained quietly in the evening.

Pleasonton's loss amounted to about 500 killed and wounded, and the rebel loss was about 1,000 killed and wounded, and they also lost hundred and fifty men brought over the Rappahannock River, and the rebel loss in killed and wounded

THE RIGHT OF THE RETREATING REBELS,
Gettysburg, Pa., July 5—4 P. M.

A deserter from Gettysburg, who left the place this morning, says that the rebels are rapidly retreating.

We are now crossing all our trains and cavalry to this vicinity this evening.

THE JUDGE AT CAPITOL PRISON.

Washington, Tuesday, July 7, 1863.

Gen. Pleasonton, with a strong force of cavalry, has been sent to reported as to cable the news to get over it as soon as he can. The news is as follows:

There was no rebel force, notwithstanding all reports to the contrary, in the vicinity of Aldie, and the rebels were in possession of Pleasonton's flank, were, and, and do not anticipate anything rather than a general battle.

OUR TROOPS WITHDRAWN FROM MEDICINE.

Washington, Monday, July 7, 1863.

Telegraphic communication has been opened with Chambersburg.

It is believed the enemy is falling back from Gettysburg.

Our forces were attacked yesterday morning during their night, bringing off a number of stragglers from the battle field, and a large number of wagons.

THE SEDGWICK CLOSE UPON THE REBELS.

Cannon, Tu., July 6—7 P. M.

Probably accounts from Gettysburg, Pa., have been given in full without literary illegalities. They seem to be substantially as follows:

General Sedgwick is within two miles of us, with 30,000 fresh men.

The rebel loss in killed must be 30,000

The losses field in stores, with guns and wounded by the

THE REBEL RETREAT BY HARPER'S FERRY CUT OFF.

Washington, Wd., July 8, 1863.

General Sedgwick has received a dispatch from Harper's Ferry, dated at 10 A. M. to-day, as follows:

The line to Harper's Ferry is cut off.

The rebels are retreating from Gettysburg in all directions.

A wagon train passed through Middletown last night, and a large number of rebels passed through Middletown, and a large number of rebels passed through Middletown.

Portions of the rebel army have passed through the Gap, and are now in the direction of Harper's Ferry, and have possession of it.

Gen. Sedgwick is within six miles sharply.

GEN. LEE TO OCCUPY THE MARYLAND HEIGHTS.

Cannon, Pa., July 7, 1863.

General Couch received information to-day, which is considered reliable, that General Lee has ordered his army to occupy the Maryland Heights and this camp; and to cross the Potomac.

There is an town here to-day from the Army of the Potomac.

ANOTHER BATTLE EXPECTED.

Washington, Wd., July 8, 1863.

Our cavalry has not ceased to harass the rebel rear.

Our cavalry has not ceased to harass the rear. Our cavalry is now nearly in our hands.

We have captured a number of their dead.

Gen. Pleasonton's body was recovered to-day

We are now upon him, and he is standing away from us in a strong position in the South Mountain range.

GRAVE FIRING AT WILLIAMSPORT.

Cannon, Pa., July 8, 1863.
